HUSKERS HAVE A CHANCE TO LIFT BIG 10

It has been a while since Nebraska has been "the team". No conference championships, no real big marquee wins. (Georgia was a very good win last year all things considered) but this years Huskers, with a Heisman hopeful and young talent have garnered some, a small amount of attention. Which is really hard when the letters SEC are not in your conference title. However, if they can stay focused, which at times seems difficult. Could be the lift the BIG 10 needs. The Huskers have plenty of challenges left before them, with a Road trip to Wisconsin, a visit from Minnesota and a final road trip to Iowa but the Huskers will be favored in all of those games barring a weak showing this weekend against a much overmatched Purdue team.

If the Huskers can win out and beat MSU or OSU then the Huskers will have an outside chance at a minimum of a real quality Bowl game against a top team. I hope the Huskers play MSU in the Championship game as they could then erase the one loss and put them on plane with Oregon. (If it is OSU I feel our chances are less.) That would be key because Nebraska plays better defense than Oregon and according to what you read that carries weight. So could this be the group that brings some recognition to the BIG 10 and more importantly back to Husker Nation. I hope so. It has been a long time coming for Husker Players and Fans. Still many obstacles to overcome but the table is set and it is in the hands and heads of the players and coaches to finish this year strong.

Just want to say thanks to the 49 people who showed up to the Northwestern game. Way to go FVH members. Last week was we only had 16 people come, we did have a couple of new faces as well. Thanks to those who came in and said no to the leaves and outside work that still needed attention. I know 11 am and lower quality opponents plus a fantastic October day before winter usually spells trouble for watch parties. But this week it will be cold and crummy so come on over to Holidays at 2:30 watch your Favorite Huskers roll up on Purdue and watch big Red notch a 8th win this season.

Nebraska vs Purdue Game Notes

I attended the Purdue game last year and what a sad stadium and sad team that was. I have never been to a college football game with less going on than at Purdue last season. My 11 year old said he would rather watch Nebraska loose at Memorial Stadium than watch them play a team like that in a stadium like Purdue. He was referring to the emptiness. I told him to not get carried away about Nebraska loosing at home that was a bit extreme but you can see what kind of impression a stadium and the excitement or lack of can have.

Now I know Purdue was in the middle of a bad season, but this should be a shock for this team when they see 90,00 plus screaming red clad fans yelling HUSKER!! POWER!! (more than double of the number that watched in Purdue.) Purdue has never played in Nebraska, Welcome Boilermakers. Purdue did play at Notre Dame (80,000 seats) this year but we all know Notre Dame fans can be bought, remember when the Holy Stadium was turned Red? I believe it is imperative the Husker fans put it to the Boilermakers and the Husker football team smash Purdue. This game needs to be a 20 point plus margin.

Purdue put up 14 on Notre Dame and led early then lost 30-14. They also played Michigan State tough for the early part of the game then lost 45-31 and almost shocked Minnesota who several were high on at the time but now know that the Gophers were waiting to fall. Purdue did beat Illinois. Nebraska cannot go to sleep on this team as they are much improved and are coming off a bye week.

HUSKER Photo ART GALLERY

Trevor has completed another digital work of one of his favorite Nebraska Players. Trevor typically spends an hour or two creating his images that start out as a photo. Then by mixing in other photos or textures plus painting and other special effects on many layers he ends up with his final product. Below is a sample of where the photo begins and a completed work. If anybody else is out there creating works send them to me and I will include them in future newsletters.
